THE CRITICS

THE CHAIRPERSON

Mrs. Lee Phipps has been the principal at Strathcona Composite for nine years. During this time she has supported Scona in all athletic and scholastic achievements. We would like to wish Scona's No. 1 Fan well in her new home in Victoria.

OF THE RATINGS BOARD

FAREWELL MESSAGE

As we near the end of this school year, I, along with the Graduating Class of '86, am about to leave Scona for the last time. Much as I have enjoyed my nine years at Scona as your principal, I am really looking forward to the next era of my life--I admit to some trepidation, some wonder, some awe as to what lies ahead. However, after fifty-four years in the school environment, twelve years in school as you have done, seven years of University and thirty-five years of teaching in addition to raising five children in my spare time, I am ready for a holiday, a rest, and many new experiences! Thus, although we are all a little unclear as to all that the future holds for us, I am certain that we will be ready for the future whatever it may be because of the basic values that have been instilled in us by our parents and by our school.

One's beliefs or basic values are revealed not so much in words or in formal creeds as in assumptions on which one habitually acts and in the basic values by which all choices are tested.

The cornerstone of my own value system was laid in childhood by parents who believed that personal integrity came first. They never asked, "What will you think of yourself if you do this or fail to do that?" This living up to one's own conception of oneself became a basic value and the question "what will people think?" took a subordinate place.

A second basic value, in some ways an extension of the first, I owe to an old professor who had suffered more than his share of grief and trouble. Over and over he said to us: "The one thing that really matters is to be bigger than the things that can happen to you. Nothing that can happen to you is half so important as the way in which you meet it."

Gradually, I realized that here was the basis of the only real security and peace of mind that a human being can have. Nobody can be sure when disaster, disappointment, injustice or humiliation may come to him through no fault of his own. Nor can one be guaranteed against one's own mistakes and failures. But the way we meet life is ours to choose and when integrity, fortitude, dignity and compassion are our choice, the things that can happen to us lose their power over us. The acceptance of these two basic values leads to a third. If what one is and how one meets life are of first importance, one is not impressed by another's money, status, or power, nor does one judge people by their race, color, or social position. This opens up a whole new world of relationships; for when friendships are based on qualities of mind and character, one can have friends among old and young, rich and poor, famous, and unknown, educated and unlettered, and among people of all races of all nations. Given these three basic values, a fourth becomes inevitable. It is one's duty and obligation to help create a social order in which persons are more important than things, ideas more precious than gadgets, and in which individuals are judged on the basis of personal worth. Moreover, for this judgment to be fair, human beings must have an opportunity for the fullest development of which they are capable. One is thus led to work for a world of freedom and justice through those social agencies and institutions which make it possible for people everywhere to realize their highest potential. As you leave Scona, as we leave Scona, I am confident because of the nurturing of your parents and your school, that each one of you will achieve success in the future in your own manner. The word, success, may be defined in many ways. However, the definition of success which I would like to share with you in closing is my favorite one which I, as a single parent, clipped out and placed on the bulletin board in our home many years ago as a goal to be aspired to by my own five children. "He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has enjoyed the respect of intelligent men and women and the love of little children--who has filled his niche and accomplished his task according to his basic value system, who has left the world a better place than he found it--whether by an improved poppy, a pretty poem, or a rescued soul; who has never lacked appreciation for earth's beauty or failed to express it; who has always looked for the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory was a benediction!"

Good bye; good luck; take care; stand tall; and may God bless you!

You're learning to make the most of you.

As the school year ends and you reflect upon the past year, you realize that some of the most valuable lessons don't come from textbooks. They come from life. From the good times and not-so-good times. When you learn about people. About yourself. Or just about handling things.

And that's important. Because you never stop solving problems. You just get better at it.

Congratulations on your graduation and your success so far.

It's that time of the year again, when we stop and take a deep breath and look back at the events of the '85-'86 school year. This year has been a variety of happenings.

School started in September with Welcom Week. It began with the Scona assembly, and was followed by the grade 10 initiation, when grade 11 and grade 12 girls dressed-up grade 10 boys as they chose and fashioned them off. It all ended with the 3rd annual parking lot dance.

October came, and with it, Halloween and the events surrounding it. A costume contest, pumpkin carving, and apple bobbing happened in the large gym.

December consisted of a charity fund-raiser for the Edmonton Food Bank and a lunch time video dance with a can of food as admission. Christmas vacation started with the infamous Christmas Lit.

With spring soon arriving, we got into the school spirit with Tropicana Daze, which consisted of Hula-hoop and limbo contests, and beach volleyball.

Summer was upon us and people were enjoying the sunshine and the outdoors. An activity to add to the fun was the teachers vs students track meet. With the help of Pepsi, and the cafeteria, it turned out to be a very interesting afternoon. The following week was the ever-popular air guitar contest. The groups were excellent this year, and the audience killed themselves with laughter.

In conclusion, I would like to thank the administration, the teachers, and the parents for their support and endless patience. Most importantly, I would like to thank and congratulate everyone on the Student's Union for their help in organizing and putting on the events of the past year.

It takes a lot of time, energy, and co-operation to make a yearbook a success; this year we received nothing but help from our staff and our photographers. We would like to thank Mr. Woodrow and Mr. Willey for their patience. Thank you also to our artists, Heather Hogg, Cathy Panas, and Alan Hindle for their generous contributions. Good luck to next year's staff - you're going to need it!

THE WORLD ACCORDING TO GARP

Towards the end of your final year in Junior High, you were asked to make some important decisions. One of those decisions was the choosing of a high school. Although you probably didn't think about it at the time, this choice marked the turning point of the first decade of your scholastic endeavors. But you had nothing to worry about at all, everyone, parents, teachers, and friends included, made sure that you had plenty of time to sit back and think hard about your decision. To weigh all of the pros and cons including the athletic programs, the drama programs, and whether or not it was family tradition to attend that particular school. Finally, doing what you thought was right and choosing the best school for you, it was off to Scona.

In your first year attending Strathcona comp., you were introduced to many new and exciting things. The first of these was the smooth-flowing, well-oiled clockwork of registration. Walking from table to table, paying your fees, finding out what classes you had and with whom and getting a good look at some of the friendly faces who you suspected were teachers.

Next came the incredible and crucial matter of deciding where our lockers were going to be. Finally, at last, no more being assigned a locker between B.O. Barney and Weird Harold. Instead, one was free to choose any one of the decorative lockers in the huge, seemingly never-ending halls of the school. Or so you thought, until you discovered a day later, a note taped to your locker and written in blood which read, "Vacate this immediately or I will crush your head like a nut." After receiving a note like this, you might've wanted to play it safe and choose one of the lockers directly in front of the general office, like someone I know.

This is where it finally hit you that you were no longer part of the elite seniors that you were in your last year of Junior High School. You were no longer the top of the heap. You were, in fact, as you discovered in a very short period of time, the very bottom of the barrel compared to the huge grade 11's and 12's that were everywhere around you. And when one discovered the great number of seemingly available members of the opposite sex, one could not help but think that the possibilities were endless. However, this vision was shattered as our superiors could easily take advantage of the situation. Some grade 11 and 12's were nice enough to introduce some of us to the most popular man in the school, Mr. John T. Bowl and his magic specialty the lumpy-swirley. Yes, that first year at Scona marked the beginning of the best times of your life.

Grade 11 was perhaps the most controversial year. It differed in fact, in many ways from both grade ten and twelve, however most would agree, that it was for this class, a very inspiring year.

The beginning of the year seemed a stab in the back: our older siblings were introduced to mill registration, and we were the first witnesses of its downfall. After a horrifying year as playmates to the most undesirable teachers in the school, we were ready to choose the best, but no, that was not to be, mill registration was gone, and gone for good, and thanks to who? Those yahoo's that were the pride of Scona, the grade 12's. The wonderful substitution, which was expected to be received with loving arms, was, the departmental examination. Actually, we all know that there are no undesirable teachers that walk through the halls of Scona, in fact quite the opposite, through those halls walk champions. It was the beginning of the year, and we were starting to realize, getting involved not only payed off, but was also fun. We were infact champions, school spirit seemed not quite so embarrassing as it once did, and we always remembered to keep off that immaculate crest. We actually began to listen to the announcements, and were therefore indoctrinated by Mrs. Phipp's golden advice to work hard and play hard, we were soon convinced that Scona kids were good kids. We not only attended dances, but we danced also, with girls and boys that we had no fears of dancing with, as we once did. It should also be noted that the grade 10's supplied no shortage of bathroom busdrivers on these occasions, as we looked at each other and said, "We weren't like that".

Grade 11 showed us that we had new enemies, but more importantly, new friends. We had a new confidence and we dared to sink our teeth into many new things, such as fried at the cafeteria. Ah, yes the lovely sight of a typical Scona lunch. The grade 12's probably thought we were cocky, and that we'd better be put in our place. But to us, what we thought of them was more important. As far as our teachers were concerned, it was a crucial year, academically. According to them, grade 11 was a lead up to grade 12, and we should have been developing our work habits which in years to come would decide our future. Much to their dismay our work habits were amateur but we had become very proficient at skipping classes, which was, for us, a great accomplishment but one to which our teachers were not impressed. Evidently the argument was completely one-sided. However, none of us could say that grade 11 was an uneducational year, and when it was all over we underwent two months of mental preparation for on September 2, 1985 it would be greatly needed. On this date, we were all sworn in as the pride of Scona, the champions of a new era, the role models to the young and uneducated 10's and 11's, we were standing at the starting line of a race down a long stretch that began twelve years ago, waiting, and anticipating the firing of that most crucial gun, and beginning to realize that grade 12 would be a great honor.

And now finally you have come to the year of realization. You remembered how you envied the grade 12's and now know what it is to be the seniors. You have seen it all ... the sports, the clubs, the victories, and the losses. You know how much emotion and involvement it takes and how much school spirit is demanded. But then you think about university, college, and worst of all those stupid departmental exams! And you think to yourself, "I've got to get my priorities straight." But without realizing it, you are thinking this while you are at the track, the play, or maybe even watching the lords' football team during one their winning streaks. In any case you realize that you are involved merely because you want to be. This last year makes you realize what your interests are and what you want to be or do.

This year you may think was just like any other grade 12 year. But in our view the grad class of '86 is very unique. Not only have there been many city championships on 1st class achievements, such as: the 9th, 10th, and 11th cross-country city championships, numerous, fantastic performances on the stage, prowess in the pool, several active, organized clubs, excellence on the court be it basketball, volleyball, or badminton, and the 13th, 14th, and unquestionable forthcoming 15th city track championships, and the list goes on. But as well it is hard not to help but notice, as one strolls through the halls of Scona, a feeling of pride, responsibility, wisdom, prosperity, and logic that seems to be filling the air. This is a feeling somewhat familiar to Scona, and one that has been greatly earned by the grad class of '86. In closing, Rob and I have but one message, one that can be transferred only from the T.V. to the human eyes and ears Saturdays at 4:00 on CBC. May you, fellow graduates, carry the message of these two heroic men for the rest of your lives. Live long and prosper.

TERMS OF ENDEARMENT

Tonight we graduate! We climb one rung higher on the ladder of life. Having reached this level, we sit back, heave a sigh of mixed relief and satisfaction, and give ourselves a well-earned 'pat on the back' for our accomplishment. But if we think for a moment, we realize that we could not have attained this height alone. Our thanks should flow in many directions.

To our school ... We entered as starry-eyed grade tens. The school, a mere building, held a mass of a thousand strangers. It was exciting - the unknown, waiting to be explored! During the past three years, we have BECOME the school. The friends we've made, the frequent victories, the rare defeats - we've learned to accept them graciously. The hard work, the inner satisfaction of a task well done, the foolish but enjoyable pranks, the great times we've had together - these are the high school memories we will cherish all our lives. We leave Scona with a knowledge not only of books but also of people.

Such people as our teachers who have taught us well. We may have learned seemingly useless things like how much momentum a 20lb carrot has or how long it takes for Steve the Bionic Duck to cross a choppy lake but hey, we topped the city in provincial departmentals last January, didn't we? Teachers, by revealing your knowledge to us, you have also revealed yourselves, not merely as teachers, but as people. We have learned from our courses, but we have learned other equally important lessons: the power and practical application of diplomacy, the power to choose and discriminate. Your toleration of us, sometimes, is a lesson in itself.

Such people as our parents who have played the most immediate and vital role in shaping our lives. With your understanding and often subtle, sometimes forceful, guidance, you have helped us realize our goal.

To my fellow graduates ... let me say this: WE'VE BEEN THROUGH A LOT! Twelve years of our lives have been spent cooped up inside a building for about six hours a day, one hundred and ninety days of the year. Think about it: a greater part of our lives has been spent in buildings that we call "schools". As the Class of '86 we should thank each other for providing the moral support we have needed to endure the past twelve years of our lives. The friendships we have made, the fun we've had together at work and at play (perhaps more at play than at work), we will never forget.

Tonight we say thank-you, but we hope that the future will show you a more concrete thank-you than we could ever express.

A valedictory is a farewell, a leave-taking, a formal goodbye to our school. Must we say goodbye to all this? It is true we will no longer walk the halls, or see the familiar faces in their familiar surroundings. But, we have in our possession those precious intangibles, which once obtained, can never be taken away: knowledge, skills, friendships, all tools for the future. In this way, we are not taking leave of Scona, we are taking Scona with us.

The future is a challenge, no matter which direction we choose, but we have in our possession those tools we have learned to use during the past twelve years and we are able to meet that challenge head on.

Confucius say: "The rung of a ladder was never meant to rest upon but only to hold a man's foot long enough to enable him to put the other one somewhat higher."

Good luck to each of you and keep climbing!
